Getting out of poverty is easier when you have a circle of support.

THE CIRCLES MODEL

Circles helps families become financially stable with a unique approach. You'll receive training on finances, employment, health, and communication skills. But what really makes Circles different are the relationships you'll form. We match you with two middle-income or upper-income volunteers. Getting out of poverty is easier when you have a circle of support.

LEARNING TOGETHER

After training is complete, participants are called Circle Leaders and volunteers are called Allies. As a Circle Leader, you will be leading the weekly meetings with your Allies. You will be setting your own goals. Your Allies will be there to listen, ask questions, and make suggestions. You and your Allies will learn from each other as you accomplish your goals. Weekly meetings include dinner and a curriculum for kids.

WHAT PEOPLE
SAY

"I never thought about future goals. My mindset was to make it through the day. I grew up in poverty, and my parents grew up in poverty... Now I have goals for myself and my family. This program has absolutely changed my outlook on life, and it has changed my children's future."

— Amber Schwingdorf (Circle Leader)

"The thing that keeps people stuck in poverty is fear. Fear is paralyzing and isolating. But the relationships in Circles provide a safety net of emotional support so people are willing to try new approaches without the fear of failure."

— Tammy Thompson (Circles Staff)
